

“SJC/PCH/DOHENY CONFLUENCE”

ARTIST

Jeff Westbrook

DESCRIPTION

Back in the day, after the rains, San Juan Creek would become like this as it made its way to Doheny Beach. This change made the wild ducks and the egrets happy, which made me smile.

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Growing up in Los Angeles, Jeff's first exposure to Dana Point was in the 1960s when a neighbor's father took his sons and a few of their friends to surf at Doheny Beach. In 1985, Jeff and his wife bought a new home in Dana Point and with their young son, moved in. The area was so inspiring that Jeff was compelled to learn to paint in order to retain forever his favorite local scenes. Ultimately he painted places other than Dana Point and has sold his work through galleries and commissions. He is honored to have his work selected for this City program.

LOCATION

Pacific Coast highway and Doheny Park Plaza